Dear Herb,

With all you saw in little more than a glance at a pitcture in Memphis I'm surprized you said nothing about the picture of the Simpson sox on his bedroom floor about which you did testify so persuasively.

That picture shows nothing on which he could have sat to take those socks off except the bed and obviously it had not been sat on.

If he took them off somewhere else why did he not get rid of them as say he is presumed to have done with his shoes?

And supposedly the rest of his bloody garments?

None of tha makes any sense.

Best wishes,

Harold
